Mini-bags that carry lots of style

WhoWhatWear.com

All bets have Louis Vuitton's Petite Malle — a miniaturized LV trunk — becoming the next It Bag. But if you don't have $5,000 to shell out for the tiny purse, you can still get a mini-bag that will keep you on-trend while looking oh so cute.

Here are some small purses that carry lots of style (and just the essentials).

Jack Wills Mini Cross Body Bag ($66 at us.asos.com). The electric-yellow color adds a little pop to an outfit. This all-leather bag is a mere 5 by 5 by 2 inches with a cross-body strap.

Furla Candy Mini Cross Body Bag ($148 at Amazon.com). Shiny, translucent rubber adds a modern edge to a classic, structured handbag shape. It's 5 by 6 by 2.5 inches, and has a top handle and long strap.

Marc By Marc Jacobs Percy Crossbody Bag ($159 through today at Nordstrom; $238 after the Anniversary Sale). This black and white leather bag goes with anything. It's 9 by 5.5 by 3.5 inches for a little more carrying power.

Kate Spade New York Cedar Street Monday ($148 at Kate Spade, downtown). This sliver of a bag features crosshatched leather and a partial gold chain strap. It measures 5 by 6.5 by 0.5 inches and comes in a bold green or hot pink, along with black and taupe.

Stay cool with clothes and accessories designed to beat the heat

By Caitlin King / Special to Sunday Market

Seattle's extra-hot summer has us rethinking our sartorial choices.

On the region's warmest days, it can be easier to throw on whatever will keep you cool than to wear something fashionable. But don't sweat it — you can have it both ways with these pieces that will help you breeze through the rest of summer.

CLOTHES

Heading to the office? Look for a throw-on-and-go sundress that works from 9 to 5. A silk dress, such as Madewell's Silk Playa Dress in Leopard Fade ($148), will keep you cool outdoors and is easy to layer to deal with office AC. Or stay on the cutting edge of fashion in a pair of culottes, such as Elevenes' Kinney Culottes ($128 at Anthropologie). Soft pleating and wide-leg tailoring make these summer shorts suitable for the workplace.

On weekends, the best way to battle the heat is in a bikini. Pair the Hula Honey Aztec-Printed Underwire Bandeau Bikini Top (on sale for $15 at Macy's) with the Profile Blush by Gottex Brigitte High Waist Bottom ($40 at Everything But Water, Bellevue) in teal polka-dot for an on-trend mix-and-match look. One-piece suits are especially hot this summer, and the MICHAEL Michael Kors One-Shoulder Mailot ($96 at Nordstrom), in black, coral or white, is perfect for lounging poolside.

The Marrakech Costa Swing Dress ($118 at anthropologie.com) is a breezy, pale-pink cover-up that performs double duty as a dress. It's made of crinkled cotton gauze so you can throw it in your beach bag or suitcase without fear of wrinkles.

Refined track pants were hot in winter and spring. Take the trend into summer with a pair of soft shorts, such as the Ace Delivery Sailboat Print Dolphin Shorts (on sale for $39 at Nordstrom). The lightweight shorts feature bright orange trim, and look great with a T-shirt or a slouchy button-down.

ACCESSORIES

When you want to wear flip-flops to work, step instead into J.Crew's Callie Metallic Sandals ($98). The foot-baring slides have enough style to pair with professional looks.

Chic ways to keep your cool at the office

By Brittany Anas / ShopAtHome.com

If only "suiting up" in the summer meant simply wearing a swimsuit. One can dream, right?

But unless you're a lifeguard or river-raft guide, you probably have an office dress code to follow. And, sadly, that doesn't melt away when the weather turns hot.

Experts say, though, that you can keep your cool while keeping your professional edge.

For men, shorts suits — traditional suit tops with knee-length shorts in the same material — are having a major fashion moment. But it's mostly a "don't try this at work" kind of look, says Gerilyn Manago, Men's Health fashion editor.

"Shorts suits might work for Pharrell on the red carpet, but they're not your best option for the boardroom," she says. "It's difficult for the average guy to pull off this look, so don't do it — unless you work in a creative industry or are the one signing the checks."

A summer must, however, is dressing in layers, Manago says.

"When commuting to and from the office, don't wear your suit jacket," she says. "You'll feel cooler without the extra weight."

For women, a few summer trends are working overtime since they transition well to the office.

Allison Dent, style expert for Premium Outlets, says the midi-skirt, which hits between the knee and the ankle, is a good example because it looks polished and professional.

"It works great in the office because you don't run into issues with appropriate length,"

Products take manly approach

Sunday Market and wire reports

With the opening of a new Art of Shaving retail store in the Tacoma Mall, it's hard not to notice the growth in men's grooming products.

Here are a few new products dedicated to men's specific needs.

Walking into an Art of Shaving store is a bit of a step back in time, with traditional barber services and classic brushes lining the walls. But its latest Lexington Collection Razor ($125) is all modern, using flexball technology to follow facial contours for a precise shave. Add a Pure Badger Brush ($55) and Stand ($100) for a complete, and very classy, kit.

Kiehl's has released a new collection made especially for men. The Oil Eliminator 24-Hour Anti-Shine Moisturizer ($27), Oil Eliminator Deep Cleansing Exfoliating Wash ($22) and Oil Eliminator skin looking matte and pores looking smaller.

Clinique has also unveiled a men's line. The new Clinique for Men collection (starting at $13 at department stores) includes eye serums, moisturizers, shaving essentials, a dark spot corrector, cleansers and exfoliators. Clinique counters also have a Men's Skin Care Diagnostic Tool to help new and hair smells of tobacco and vanilla. It's infused with natural oils and moisturizers such as shea butter, tea tree oil and sweet almond oil.

J. Paul's grooming products, specially formulated for those with heavy beard growth, are now available at Nordstrom. The line's Grooming Travel Shave Set ($18) is perfect for business trips or a summer escape. The set includes three six-blade razors with J. Paul's lauded shave cream in the handle.

If you're more interested in taking care of your beard than taking it off, check out the new Beardbrand Minimalist's Kit ($34.50-$45.50 at beardbrand.com). It provides the necessities to take care of your facial hair — a beard oil and mustache wax — nestled into a black walnut stand. The kit is available in four blends of oils or unscented.

Cap off your routine with a timeless scent. Eternity, the classic Calvin Klein fragrance, turns 25 this year, and the brand is celebrating with limited-edition silver bottles featuring a metallic finish. The special anniversary bottles are available for men ($74) and for women ($81, both at Macy's).

Stylish ways to beat the heat at work

Pair midi-skirts with a chunky shoe or a strappy sandal, and wear a more fitted top or accentuate your waist with a belt, Dent says.

Another trend Dent is taking note of is wide-leg trousers.

"It's light. It's breezy," Dent says. "It's great for summer and can be styled professionally."

She suggests pairing the trousers with a tank or shell and adding a blazer or cardigan as needed for meetings.

Wrap dresses in a jersey fabric also work great for the office, as they're soft and light, and the draping is figure-flattering, Dent says.

Deborah Moore, senior vice president of women's design for Land's End, says a white, no-iron shirt tucked into a skirt or pants feels fresh for summer and works well for a conservative office setting. Adding a belt or scarf can lend a pop of color.

For a casual office look, longer shorts with 9- or 10-inch inseams are a new "go-to" for creative offices, Moore says. Her office-ready tip: Add a crease to the front of the short. A ballet flat feminizes the look, she says.

If sweat is an issue, consider your base layers. Uniqlo's AIRism line includes camisoles, sleeveless tops, T-shirts and more for men and women. The light layering pieces are enhanced with quick-dry and deodorizing properties to keep you fresh (and free of sweat marks).

"It really works with your body's own natural cooling system," says Uniqlo's Eileen McMaster.

The tops come in an array of colors and patterns, hiding under more formal attire or adding a bit of color in a more casual setting.

New company Ortiz Industry exclusively makes "technical" gear that is moisture-wicking, machine washable and wrinkle-free. Pieces also have UV protection in a variety of lightweight and ultrasoft textures.

"We want people to stop worrying about appearance, sweating, fidgeting, and just focus on the task at hand," says company co-founder and CEO Claire Ortiz.

Hot clothes that look and feel cool

Keep the sun off your face and out of your eyes with a hat and sunglasses. J.Crew's Open-Weave Trilby Hat ($32.50) is the company's take on the super-hot (yet cool) Panama hat. New Belltown shop Moorea Seal boasts an array of chic, affordable sunnies, such as the rounded pink Karu Mollie Sunglasses ($24).

Going from a day at the lake to meeting friends for dinner requires a sturdy, take-everywhere bag, such as the Pendleton Short Sands Tote (on sale for $148 at Horseshoe Boutique, Ballard). The wool, canvas and leather bag has room for all of your weekend market goodies and beach necessities.

Shop Fremont's newest boutique, Pipe & Row, for a selection of printed Jammypack Coolers ($89). The stylish coolers come with a detachable USB speaker, so you can bring the music and the drinks to your next party.

When it's hot, putting on makeup may be the last thing you want to do. Ensure your skin can go without with a SkinCeuticals Summer Repair Facial ($95 at Bluemercury, U District). Offered through Aug. 31, this 50-minute treatment uses fruit acids, vitamins and botanicals to prevent and correct summer damage.

MEN

Stock up on warm-weather essentials, such as the Tommy Bahama Salerno Island Modern Fit Slub V-Neck T-Shirt ($48 at Nordstrom), which has a slim, modern fit and reverse seams. Replace your old sandals with a clean, all-white sneaker such as the Converse Jack Purcell Sneaker ($60 at Nordstrom).

You can wear a floral shirt to work when it's the Universal Works Road Shirt (on sale for $99 at Glasswing, Capitol Hill). Add a well-cut pair of shorts, such as Levi's Twill Chino Shorts (on sale for $30 at Macy's), for a weekend on the driving range or hanging with friends.

After work, hit the beach in a bold board short such as J.Crew's 7" Board Short in Navy ($69.50). Or go for a shorter look, popular this season: Club Monaco's 4" Striped Arlen Swim Trunks ($59.50) are both comfortable and classic.
